Tip of the Week:

Drink plenty of Water

Recipe of the Week: White Bread by Emelé

Ingredients:-

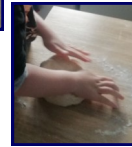

- 500g plain strong flour
- 1 sachet of dry yeast
- 1 & 1/2 teaspoons of salt
- 1 teaspoon of sugar
- 40g of soft butter
- 300mls of slightly warm water

Put dry ingredients in a bowl (yeast in one side and salt in the other). Add butter and mix with a spoon.

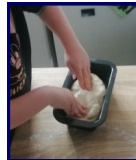

Slowly mix in the water and mix thoroughly with hands for approx. 5 minutes.

Turn onto flour dusted surface and knead for a further five minutes. Grease bowl, return dough and cover.

When dough has doubled in size (approx. 40-60 minutes) turn onto flat floured surface and knead for 15 minutes.

Place in greased 2lb loaf tin. Cover and allow to rise to double its size then bake in a preheated oven at 190° C for 35min.

Turn out onto wire rack to cool then devour with delicious toppings, yum!

Story of the Week Seaweed and 'The Stones'

Starry, Mr Elbows and Seaweed sat outside Seaweed's cave on a very warm, still evening when they spotted two very large stones floating towards them. "Stones", said Seaweed "it can't be stones, they don't float." "Oh no, not rubbish", said Mr

Elbows "I thought we'd seen the last of that problem, though, I must say, I do miss my treasure pile. What are they?" The two large round greeny, brown objects came closer and revealed themselves. Big smiley faces peeping out of the water and a big flipper on each waving a hello. Two turtles, identical, made their way to the little cave opening. "Well, well, well", said Seaweed excitedly. "Wow, it's so nice to meet you. Come and join us". They had heard about Seaweed's little cave, lovely clean beach and happy friends from Blue who was off on an adventure with a pod of dolphins he'd met in the Meganisi channel, which was right outside Seaweed's cave!

We knew immediately that this would be the perfect beach to raise our family. "Family", said Seaweed looking around, "where are they?" "Oh, they're not here yet", said the first turtle. "No, no not yet", said the second turtle. "Before anything we have to find somewhere safe and clean for the eggs to hatch. "Eggs", said Mr Elbows. "Yes, yes" said the first turtle, "but not yet", said the second turtle. "Oh, I'm confused", said Seaweed. Starry slipped into the water saying she would have a swim about and be back when everybody had sorted it all out. Poor Starry, she thought it was all too confusing! "I don't like confusion", she said, and she floated of into the beautiful inky water, her colourful little body gently swimming through the wavelets.

"It's like this", said the turtles together, "You go first!", said the second turtle, "No, you go first!" said the first turtle. "This is very confusing", said Seaweed. "Let's start at the very beginning!" said Mr Elbows. "Well", - "no, no", not together, one at a time", said Seaweed. "Well", said the first turtle looking at the second turtle "let me explain". "Turtles like us, by the way I am Angelos and this is Katkins, hatch out of eggs. The eggs are laid in soft sand and after about 8 weeks our eggs break open and we immediately make our way down the beach to the sea and swim away. This all happens in the moonlight and can be very dangerous, sometimes it's a long way to the waterside, like it was for us, and, well, you never know what might happen on that very first journey."

"Now our problem", said Katkins "is this", looking at Angelos to let him know she was taking over the story To be continued
